SUCCESS IN MUSIC

And How It Is Won

By HENRY T. FINCK

Musical Critic of NEW YORK EVENING POST

In this book the greatest living pianists, singers, teachers, and violinists tell often in their own words of the secret of their success. Paderewski has written a chapter of the greatest interest for it on "tempo rubato." Mr. Finck takes up all the practical questions which have to be answered in planning and carrying out a musical career and gives most practical and invaluable advice. Among the artists who have contributed to the book are Sembrich, Emma Eames, Geraldine Farrar, Caruso, Jean de Reszke, Kreisler, Wullner, and others.

PEWTER ^{AND THE} AMATEUR COLLECTOR

By EDWARDS J. GALE

Superbly illustrated. $2.50 net (Postpaid $2.75)

A clear and comprehensive guide for collectors and lovers of pewter, which takes up thoroughly and for the first time the history and description of American pewter as well as of the English work in that metal, and is finely and practically illustrated. The history of pewter, the account of the makers and their marks, the description of characteristic pieces, are accompanied by invaluable suggestions for collectors.

Much entertainment is provided in Maria Thompson Daviess's "Miss Selina Lue" (The Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis). The middle aged, capable, ready witted American woman is coming into her own in fiction. She is found throughout the country and her admirable qualities, touched slightly by local circumstances, are pictured by many industrious women writers who generally keep close to the truth. In this border country example we have a wholly lovable and sensible woman, many amusing children and neighbors and a pleasant love story.

A New Holiday Volume by HENRY JAMES ITALIAN HOURS

Nowhere in literature is there to be read a more exquisite and sympathetic description of the beauties of Italian cities than in this book by Henry James. He starts with Venice and devotes the first five chapters to his impressions of "The Bride of the Adriatic." Then follows "From Chambéry to Milan," and the "Saint-Gothard"; after which comes a delightful picture of Rome in five chapters; Sienna, Florence, Ravenna, Naples, Capri and The Tuscan Cities.

Mr. JOSEPH PENNELL spent some months in Italy making the 32 full-page illustrations for these chapters. They are reproduced in color, an entirely new treatment of his work, and the result is extremely beautiful. A decorative and elaborate design stamped in gold gives a rich appearance to the binding.

A Noted American Critic:

"The book is almost a perfect artistic whole. It is a Classic. It simply must live, owing to its vital human appeal to all classes of readers, and in my opinion will—when understood and realized—rank with the biggest novels of English and American literature, notably "Vanity Fair" and "David Copperfield." It will be the talk of the literary day, in every one's mouth."

A Noted English Critic:

"The work charms me. It is strong, original, very clever, and admirably written in good scholarly English. The characters are clear and well worked out. The work, and parts of it especially, simply fascinate me. Each time I have read it my enjoyment and pleasure increase, and that is a pretty strong test as to the quality of the work. It is utterly new, and the jaded taste of to-day may find it a strong tonic to pick them up!"

IT NEVER CAN HAPPEN AGAIN

By

William De Morgan

WILLIAM DE MORGAN

Author of "Joseph Vance," "Alice-for-short,"
"Somehow Good," and "It Never Can Happen Again."

12mo, 688 pp., $1.75

IN five years Mr. De Morgan has achieved a reputation second to none among the English novelists.

Second large edition before publication nearly exhausted

A strange story in which De Morgan's humor, humanity, and optimism again dominate, tho pathos and dramatic, even tragic, episodes are not wanting. It is a masterpiece of construction and intimate knowledge, even more subtly handled than his earlier novels. Three distinct stories thread their way thru it, and at the end all are unraveled with unerring skill. One of the main themes is the love of Blind Jim for his little daughter Lizarann, and an account of how he rendered brave service despite his blindness. Another tells of the doings of a successful novelist, his nice commonplace wife, and a third person, Judith Arkroyd, with stage ambitions, perhaps the most fascinating woman Mr. De Morgan has yet drawn. "It Never Can Happen Again" is Mr. De Morgan at his best.

THE ROSARY

By Florence L. Barclay

Author of "The Wheel of Time," Etc.

A delightful love story, but a love story written along lines that are refreshingly novel. It is the story of a young artist, a worshipper of the beautiful, who sees shining through the features of a woman of rather plain exterior the illuminating beauty of the soul. The girl, however, realizing his devotion to the beautiful, refuses to have him make the sacrifice, rejecting his advances. How when he is blinded and needs her she becomes his nurse, and how, gaining his confidence owing to her voice, to him so reminiscent, she pleads the cause through fictitious letters of her supposedly absent self, is set forth with a charm of style that will captivate the reader.

NOTES IN SEASON.

JOHN MCBRIDE Co. have just ready "Dorrien Carfax," which a noted American critic says "will, when understood and realized, rank with the biggest novels of literature, notably 'Vanity Fair' and 'David Copperfield.'"

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. will publish before the end of the month a new book by Drs. Elwood Worcester and Samuel McComb, entitled "The Christian Religion as a Healing Power." This book, the publishers think, is much more than an additional essay on the Emmanuel movement, inasmuch as it covers its subject broadly and leaves no room for doubt or question.

J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have now ready Lieutenant Shackleton's "The Heart of the Antarctic: Own Study of His Antarctic Voyage, 1907-1909," in two volumes, with full-page color plates and upwards of 300 illustrations from photographs taken by members of the expedition. Outside of the scientific facts and discoveries revealed in the book, it is full of exciting adventure, and is one of the great works of exploration and travels for all time. The news has come from London this week that King Edward, in the distribution of birthday honors, has knighted Lieutenant Ernest H. Shackleton.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have now ready "Success in Music, and How It Is Won," by Henry T. Finck, musical critic of the New York Evening Post, who lets the greatest living pianists, singers, teachers and violinists tell, often in their own words, of the secret of their success. Mr. Finck takes up all the practical questions which must be answered in planning and carrying out a musical career, and gives invaluable advice. Among those giving of their knowledge are Sembrich, Emma Eames, Geraldine Farrar, Caruso, Jean De Reszke, Kreisler, Willner and others. A useful guide for lovers and collectors is Edwards J. Gale's "Pewter and the Amateur Collector," superbly illustrated, giving a history of pewter and an account of the makers and their marks; and Stevenson's "Child's Garden of Verse" is brought out with full-page drawings by Florence Storer.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY will publish on November 20 a sumptuous edition of "Italian Hours," by Henry James, an exquisite and sympathetic description of the beauties of Italian cities, such as Venice, Milan, Rome, Siena, Florence, the Tuscan cities and others, with thirty-two full-page illustrations by Joseph Pennell, reproduced in color by a new process; "Farming It" by Judge Henry A. Shute, author of "The Real Diary of a Real Boy," in which, in the most amusing way, he tells of his own experience when a young lawyer out of health in buying a farm to secure outdoor exercise; "Warriors of Old Japan," stories of valor, conquest, loyalty or faith, half legendary, half historical, by Madame Yei Ozaki, wife of the mayor of Tokio, with Japanese illustrations and a sketch of the author by Mrs. Hugh Fraser; "Diplomatic Memoirs," by Hon. John W. Foster, former Secretary of State, and the dean of American diplomatists, who began his diplomatic career in 1873, when he was appointed Minister to Mexico, serving subsequently in Russia and Spain until he succeeded Blaine as Secretary of State; also, the second book of "Children's Classics in Dramatic Form," by Augusta Stevenson.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

 The prices of net books issued by publishers who protect the prices of their new publications are preceded in this list by the double asterisk , and the word net follows the price. Works of fiction (not net) of which a minimum price is protected by their publishers, are preceded by a dagger †. The prices of net books not protected are preceded by a single asterisk *, and the word net follows the price.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory, c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (annotated, illus. rated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.; n. p., in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the trade only upon application.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Abbott, Lyman, D.D. The temple. N. Y., Macmillan, 1909. c. 9+171 p. D. cl., $1.25 net.

The temple is the body, the house of the soul. Dr. Abbott writes of its uses entirely from the standpoint of their relation to the things of the spirit. There are chapters on the eye, the ear, the tongue, which consider what we should see, hear and speak in order to develop the best that is in us. Companion volume to "The great Companion," describing the Christian's faith, and "The other room," the faith in immortality.

Alcott, Louisa May. Flower fables; decorations by Frances Bassett Comstock. N. Y., McLoughlin Bros., [1909.] 176 p. Q. cl., $1. These fables are well-known, but now they come dressed in a gay flower-binding, with page illustrations of fairies, butterflies and many blossoms.

Ames, Fisher, jr. By reef and trail; Bob Leach's adventures in Florida; il. by C: Livingston Bull. Bost., Brown & Page, 184 Summer St., [1909.] c. 8+312 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A book written about a real boy who lives on the Florida coast. Alligator hunts; how the brown pelicans raise their young; where the giant loggerhead lays her eggs—such interesting facts with many more are woven in this tale of adventure.

Bacon, B: Wisner, D.D. The founding of the church. Bost., Houghton Mifflin Co., 1909. c. 90 p. S. (Modern religious problems; ed. by Ambrose White Vernon.) cl., 50 c.

The aim of this series of books is to lay before the great body of intelligent people in the English-speaking world the precise results of modern scholarship, so that men both within and without the churches may be able to understand the conception of the Christian religion (and of its sacred books) which obtains among its leading scholars to-day, and that they may intelligently co-operate in the great practical problems with which the churches are now confronted. For other books in the series in this issue see Hyde, Knox, Scott.

Baird, Jean Katharine. Sixty-five on time; half-tones by Arthur De Bebian. Akron, O., Saalfeld Publishing Co., 1909. c. 273 p. O. cl., $1.25.

A boys' story of railroading with plenty of action and a mystery which is carefully concealed until the proper moment for revelation. By the author of "Cash Three," "Danny," "Little Rhody," etc.

Baldwin, C: Sears. Composition, oral and written. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1909. c. 13+364 p. D. cl., $1.20.

Author is professor of rhetoric in Yale University. Book is an adaption of his "Writing and speaking" to more rapid use by more advanced students.

Barnes, Annie Maria. A little lady at the fall of Quebec; il. by Wuanita Smith. Phil., Penn Publishing Co., 1909. c. 343 p. pls. D. cl., †$1.25.

An interesting story of stirring historical times. Mistress Anne Weldon, an English girl of wealth, is in Quebec at the time of its fall. Through her information the English gain the Plains of Abraham.

Beach, E: Latimer. An Annapolis second classman; il. by Frank T. Merrill. Phil., Penn Publishing Co., 1909. c. 389 p. pls. D. cl., †$1.25.

Third book on Naval Academy life by this author. Spirited and vigorous, with plenty of mischief but a manly willingness to take the consequences. Robert Drake discovers a plot against his country and helps to thwart it.

Beard, A: Field. The story of John Frederic Oberlin. Bost., Pilgrim Press, [1909.] c. 13+106 p. por. O. cl., *$1.25 net.

Oberlin was pastor in a little Swiss village, Waldersbach, from 1767 to 1826. He served his people faithfully through many years of storm and stress, staying at his post all through the French Revolution and Napoleonic wars, when the nearness of his parish to the boundaries made the position one of great danger. He established infant schools which used kindergarten methods, anticipating Pestalozzi by forty, and Froebel by seventy years. Though he worked in obscurity, yet his influence has been far reaching and here in the United States we have at Oberlin, Ohio, a city and college named in his honor.

Benedix, Roderich J. Eigensinn: [a play.] N. Y., Oxford University Press, (Amer. Branch,) 1909. 59 p. S. pap., 15 c.

Benn, Mrs. Edith Fraser. An overland trek from India by side-saddle, camel, and rail; the record of a journey from Beluchistan to Europe; with 80 il. and a map. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1909. 15+343 p. O. cl., *$5 net.

In 1900 Mrs. Benn's husband was appointed British consul in Seistan, in eastern Persia, and determined to make the journey via India in order to collect a suitable office establishment. He was accompanied by his wife and two year old daughter; the journey, full of hardship and discomfort, proved too difficult for the little girl and she was sent to England. It is seven years since the trip was begun, and four years since it ended, during which time the means of transportation have vastly improved. Appendix. Index.

Bennett, F. The story of W. J. E. Bennett, founder of St. Barnabas', Pimlico and vicar of Froome-Selwood, and of his part in the Oxford Church movement of the nineteenth century. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1909. 16+304 p. por. O. cl., *$2.25 net.

William James Early Bennett was born in 1804 and died in 1873, thus living through a period of upheaval in the Church of England. He was the friend and supporter of the leaders of the Oxford Movement in its fight against liberalism and rationalism and engaged in lifelong struggle to free the church from the tyranny of the state. He founded the church and school of St. Barnabas, Pimlico, in the heart of a slum district, and was perpetual curate of St. Paul's, Knightsbridge. Appendix. Index.

Bennett, Johannes. La belle San Antone. N. Y., Neale Publishing Co., 1909. c. 288 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Bond, Francis. Visitor's guide to Westminster Abbey; il. by 12 plans, 36 photographs and other illustrations. N. Y., Oxford University Press, (Amer. Branch,) 1909. 93 p. S. buckram, 40 c.

By the author of "Gothic architecture in England," "English cathedrals illustrated," etc. Book gives detailed information about every part of the Abbey and many plans and illustrations.

Briscoe, Margaret Sutton, [Mrs. A. J. Hopkins.] The image of Eve; a romance with alliterations. N. Y., Harper, 1909. c. 218 p. front. D. cl., $1.25.

Bright little tale of a charming matron and her husband with their devoted bachelor friend Peter. The matron is always making plans for Peter's marrying, but they never come to anything, for which she is really grateful. At last her own daughter, Daphne, grows up, and then all plans and fancies have a delightful ending.

Bryan, W: Jennings. The prince of peace. Chic., Reilly & Britton Co., [1909.] c. 32 p. 12°, pap., in envelope, 35 c.

A discourse in which Mr. Bryan sets forth his belief in the divinity of Christ and the peace which comes from following in His footsteps. If a higher ideal, a more Christ-like aim, be substituted for the world's present ideals and aims, then the reign of the Prince of Peace will have been firmly established on earth, and the abuses and wrongs of humanity will be abolished.

Burgess, Frank Gelett. Blue goops and red; a manual of polite deportment for children who would be good; showing how and how not to behave everywhere; with illustrations by Gelett Burgess. N. Y., Frederick A. Stokes Co., 1909. c. 81 p. Q. cl., $1.35 net.

The goops have long been known to the little folks. In this book Mr. Gelett has made a departure; he has divided the kingdom of goops into two parts—Red Goops, good; Blue Goops, bad. Happy the mother who can rhyme her children into proper manners.

Burgess, Frank Gelett. Lady Mechante; or, life as it should be; being divers precious episodes in the life of a naughty nonpareil; a farce in filigree; with il. by the author. N. Y., Frederick A. Stokes Co., [1909.] c. 'or. 15+393 p. O. cl., $1.50 net.

This is a clever delineation of the follies of society. Made piquant by the heroine who accomplishes astounding things through cajolery of communities of the "smart set" in London, San Francisco, New York—and even in Boston!

Burton, Ernest Dewitt, Smith, J: Merlin Powis and Gerald Birney. Biblical ideas of atonement; their history and significance. Chic., University of Chicago Press, 1909. c. 8+335 p. D. cl., $1.

Papers appeared in the Biblical World and have been gathered and revised with two chapters added to form this book. Traces the idea of atonement through the Old Testament, non-canonical Jewish literature and the New Testament. The new chapters consider the significance of the Biblical teachings concerning atonement and modern thought on the subject. Bibliography (4 p.). Subject index. Index to scripture passages.

Bushman paintings copied [in color] by M. Helen Tongue; with a preface by H: Balfour. N. Y., Oxford University Press, (Amer. Branch,) 1909. 47 p. pls. Q. pap., $9.25, boxed.

The Bushmen of South Africa painted and carved events in their life-history on the walls of caves and rock-shelters, where many of them may still be seen, though in a number of instances they have been marred and destroyed. In order to preserve these records of a primitive race, Miss Tongue has made careful copies of the paintings which are here reproduced in loose plates, accompanied by an introduction by Henry Balfour giving much information concerning these Africans and their work.

Croly, Herbert. The promise of American life. N. Y., Macmillan, 1909. c. 7+468 p. O. cl., $2 net.

Mr. Croly says that our democratic system and prosperous future are believed in by the American people with an almost religious zeal which has produced an "active torpor," from which we should be aroused if a true democracy is to be achieved. He examines present economic and political conditions, shows what may be expected in the future, and gives critical sketches of prominent men like Bryan, Hearst, Jerome and Roosevelt. Index.

Curtin, Jeremiah. A journey in southern Siberia; the Mongols, their religion and their myths; with a map and numerous illustrations from photographs. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1909. c. 14+319 p. O. cl., $3 net.

Mr. Curtin devoted many years of his life to the study of the Mongols. Two books of his, "The Mongols" and "The Mongols in Russia," have appeared since his death, and now this third one is ready. For notice of the first two see American Catalog, 1905-'07, v. 2, '07, and Annual American Catalog, 1908. The present volume describes a journey to the out-of-the-way towns of southern Siberia, where live the Buriats, the few survivors of a people once the terror of Europe. The primitive folk-lore and myth-tales of the Mongols are presented, many of them for the first time, and the home life and customs of the people described. Dr. Eliot contributed a prefatory note. Indexes.

Fagan, Ja. O. Labor and the railroads. Bost., Houghton Mifflin Co., 1909. c. 164 p. D. cl., *$1 net.

The author of "The confessions of a railroad signalman" discusses the relation between the railroad employer and employee. His many years' service in a signal tower, and close contact and observation of the conditions surrounding his work make his opinions of great practical value. He says that compulsion has been the effectual factor in wage-progress, improvement in labor conditions, and safety contrivances on the railroads. He also points out that the mediator appointed to arbitrate strike difficulties should judge on the merits of the case, and not on the peace at any price basis.

Heck, W. H. Mental discipline and educational values. N. Y., John Lane Co., (The Bodley Head,) 1909. c. 147 p. D. cl., $1 net.

The "the important thing in education is not the thing learned, but the process of learning," is an old axiom which is being gradually refuted, in as much as it claims that all subjects have an equal value as mental discipline. The author thinks memory, imagination, reasoning, etc., are names which stand for vague classification of mental responses to stimuli. The mind develops in a specific manner in answer to specific stimuli and the various studies are considered as educational in greater or less degree from this standpoint. References in foot-notes.

The letters which tell the story are from Elizabeth, Mary, Edward, Henry VIII., Anne Boleyn, the foreign ambassadors at the English court, and others more or less intimately connected with Elizabeth's life from her birth in 1533 until her coronation in 1559. List of printed works and manuscripts from which selection was made (2 p.). Index.

Munford, Beverley B. Virginia's attitude toward slavery and secession. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1909. c. 13+329 p. O. cl., $2 net.

This book is written because the author feels that no adequate and truthful reason has yet been advanced in explanation for the act of secession on the part of the Cotton States. Those attributed to Virginia are ignoble, and the author is desirous of explaining Virginia's position, which was, that the Federal Government had not the right to use force of arms in coercing the Cotton States to its will. Admitting the varying local causes, this he considers was the main, general cause. There are references to authors and historians throughout the book.

New York [State.] Commissioners for Detecting and Defeating Conspiracies. Minutes of the Commissioners for Detecting and Defeating Conspiracies in the state of New York; Albany county sessions, 1778-1781; ed. by Victor Hugo Paltsits. In 2 v. v. 1, 1778-1779; v. 2, 1780-1781. Albany, N. Y., State of New York, 1909. 430; 431-836 p. facsim., Q. cl. (Distributed officially and by exchange.)

During the Revolution New York had many Tories within her boundaries, and legislated against this contingent. A commission, not to exceed ten, was appointed to detect and defeat conspiracies; the reasons given for creating such a commission were, "the present invasion of this state," "the disaffection of sundry inhabitants of the same," and to guard and secure effectually the peace of the state "against the wicked machinations and designs of the foreign and domestic foes thereof." Mr. Paltsits, the state historian, has edited the minutes of the Albany County sessions in these two volumes, which form a valuable contribution to the history of the state during the Revolution. Appendices.

Nicholson, Meredith. The lords of high decision; il. [in col.] by Arthur I. Keller. N. Y., Doubleday, Page & Co., 1909. c. 9+503 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Scene is laid in Pittsburgh and the coal mines of Pennsylvania. Mr. Roger Craighill, a wealthy and respected citizen of the Iron City, is quite unconsciously, most pompous and self-righteous, and his attitude toward his son Wayne, a dissipated young man, does much to drive the youth to further wrong doing. Through the efforts of a fine girl of inferior station, whom he learns to love, and Joe Denny, his devoted follower, the young man at last conquers himself and wins happiness. By the author of "The house of a thousand candles."

Old rhymes pictured [in col.] by Mabel Lucie Attwell. N. Y., Raphael Tuck & Sons, Ltd., [1909.] no paging, F. bds., $1.50.

Bo-peep and Tommy Tucker and the Queen of Hearts, with others of their kin, pass a gay existence between the covers of this book.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. Jeanne of the marshes; il. by J. V. McFall and C. E. Brock. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1909. c. '08. 382 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The first scenes are laid in London; then there is a change to an old mansion in Norfolk, England. The host is a poseur; his brother is an honest giant. A princess who is an adventurer and a major who lives by cheating at cards have Jeanne under their protection. These characters the author gets into amazing situations in this rather sensational story. Smugglers are introduced with great effect.

Volume of juvenile sayings and doings of which the nucleus was a collection made by the late Rear Admiral Preble and left with very slight editing and a note indicating a hope that it might be valuable to his children. Edited and enlarged by his son, another George Henry Preble.

Price, A. C. Leeds and its neighborhood; an illustration of English history. N. Y., Oxford University Press, (Amer. Branch,) 1909. 23+328 p. il. fold. map, D. cl., 90 c.

The preface emphasizes that this book is neither a history of Leeds nor of England. It is an attempt to illustrate certain portions of English history by bringing them into connection with the story of this neighborhood. It is written to impress upon the mind of the student great tendencies and principles underlying the course of events which are often lost sight of through the details of history thronging text-books. The minute consideration given to sefari life and outfit; to topographical descriptions; to the habits of birds and beasts is such as to give an accurate and trustworthy account of African exploring and hunting, for the use of any who may follow Dr. Rainsford. The independent narratives which had misinformed him caused the author to rely only on notes made at the time, and stories told only by participants in the action. Appendices and vocabulary of African words.

Rawlinson, B. 502; a collection of pieces in prose and verse in the Irish language compiled during the eleventh and twelfth centuries, now published in facsimile from the original manuscript in the Bodleian Library; with an introd. and indexes by Kuno Meyer. N. Y., Oxford University Press, (Amer. Branch,) 1909. 14+104+42 p. F. bds., $40.50.

The manuscript volume, of which the vellum portions are here reproduced in photographic facsimile, owes its present form to Sir James Ware (1594-1666), who had the various parts, both paper and vellum, strongly bound together. At Ware's death the manuscript passed to the Earl of Clarendon, and at the Chandos sale in 1747 Thomas Rawlinson bought it. He bequeathed it to the Bodleian Library, where it has since remained. Middle-Irish is the language of the manuscript, which contains Irish history and genealogy, as well as poetry dealing with Old and New Testament incidents. Index to initial lines. Mr. Thomas is associate professor of sociology in the University of Chicago and author of "Sex and society." Anthropology and ethnology are subjects closely related to the study of history, sociology and pedagogy, though this is seldom recognized by students. In this work the author hopes that he has shown this relationship. He first considers the external environment and the mind of man, and then the activities growing out of these. The bibliographies of the different parts have reference to the types of activity there treated without regard to race. Supplementary bibliographies (42 p.) contains more general titles arranged by races and countries.

The Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

NOVEMBER 13, 1909.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—LORD BACON.

KEEPING UP STOCK.

AT this time of the year the vexing question of keeping stock, more than ever, confronts the bookseller. The young and enthusiastic recruit in the ranks of the trade, and some well-seasoned ones too, for that matter, are often tempted to too great liberality in their orders for new publications—to their confusion, later on, and sometimes to their undoing altogether. While we do not for a moment discourage the keeping of approved stock in as great variety as the extent of the local demand, character of customers and resources of the bookseller shall fairly justify, we would caution the bookseller to remember that new books, like new men, have their reputation to make, and it does not pay to discount either indiscriminately.

On the other hand, it is equally bad policy to let stock run down, and then to order from hand to mouth. Indeed, it is a matter of general complaint among publishers that it is difficult to get booksellers to keep even a moiety of their best-selling books. They complain that it is useless to create a demand in any locality unless the bookseller there will keep their books. And this seems reasonable enough. In the main, the saying that "if you haven't got the goods, you will not sell them," holds good in the book business as in every other business. It is as necessary for the bookseller to place his literary wares directly before the public as it is for the dealer in dry goods to show his linens, silks, etc. No written or printed description or verbal recommendation can begin to have the potency in influencing sales as an inspection of the books themselves. Especially is this true of the more or less standard books that may be relied upon to be in demand for some years, and that therefore ought always to be found in a well-appointed bookstore. It is rare that even a set of the works of such popular authors as Dickens and Scott is sold except when brought to the attention of the purchaser with a reference to its new illustrations and new get-up, or some other advantage over previous editions. Fine sets of books arranged in cases in the bookstore suggest a similar disposition in the home library. Books are costly and must be exhibited that their value may be appreciated. Every bookbuyer knows that so long as the book he has in mind is not procurable except by a direct order through his bookseller, he will consult his necessities very closely before giving that order; whereas if the book is placed immediately within his reach he will in most cases overcome his prudential scruples.

There are many tried and desirable books in the market which are certain of a sale if properly presented to the bookbuying public, and the only risk involved in buying them in quantity is in the fact that some of them may become shop-worn—a risk that may easily be guarded against by proper wrapping and storing. To neglect them altogether on this possibility, and only to supply them in cases where they are ordered, is to neglect one of the greatest opportunities of cultivating and extending the book business. The policy of keeping only sufficient stock to answer the purpose of a sign-board is not one that will make the bookstore either the attractive or useful place which it should be in the community.

A NOVEL PROPOSITION FOR INDEXING BOOKS.

A WRITER in the London Globe recently said: "I have long thought that a society of book-loving young people, who desire to come near to the heart of literature, and who would be inspired by the idea of doing literature real service, might be formed for the purpose of producing first class indexes to unindexed or badly indexed books. Let standard editions be used, and let these indexes be issued in annual volumes. They would be of the greatest use. For example, an exhaustive index to Montaigne's Essays would be invaluable. At the moment I name other works at random. Southey's Life and Letters in seven volumes is full of good stuff, and it has no index. There are many novels and books of poetry or essays that need indexing, as, for example, 'Pickwick,' Wordsworth and Hazlitt's essays. A place index to the Dictionary of National Biography would be a big task, but it would be a fine achievement. Matthew Arnold's letters have no index and are nearly unreadable on that account. A general Ruskin index would be invaluable. Such work could be done by an association of young people, and I do not see why it could not be organized on lines of both profit and pleasure."

WHY PAPER STRETCHES.

ALL machine-made papers, according to the Printing Art, possess one pronounced difference from hand-made. This is their propensity for stretching more across than with the grain; one reason for which is that their elasticity has been nearly exhausted by the necessary tension in running over the machine. Herein lies an element for the consideration of paper users. To appreciate its importance one has only to think of it in its application to pianola roll paper, and to imagine what horrible discords would result from a badly stretched sheet.

This brings us to the question of atmospheric conditions in regard to paper. An air-dried sheet of paper contains under ordinary conditions about 7 per cent. of water. One authority states that there is a variation of from 2.3 per cent. at 30 per cent. relative humidity to 21.5 per cent. at 100 per cent. The elasticity in the machine direction increases with the humidity from 2.9 per cent. at 30 per cent. to 10.2 per cent. at 80 per cent. relative humidity, then decreases to 8.9 per cent. at 100 per cent. In the cross direction the elasticity gradually rises from 3.1 per cent. at 30 per cent. to 14.4 per cent. at 90 per cent., falling to 14.1 per cent. at 100 per cent. relative humidity. Paper when wet expands instead of shrinking like cloth. This, of course, is due to the absorption of water by the fibres and their consequent swelling. The fact is clearly evidenced in the curling of a sheet wet on one side, due to the expansion of that side. As soon as the moisture works through, elasticity in the machine direction increases with the humidity.

The lesson to be drawn from these facts is almost too obvious to require further elaboration. It is too often the case, however, that the manufacturer of books disregards the nature of fibres. Many books are stiff and inflexible because the grain runs across instead of up and down the page, while many a large-page book, or particularly a periodical of light weight paper, is disagreeably and needlessly flimsy for the opposite reason. The end leaves, too, sometimes proclaim the ignorance of a binder by their cockling along the back, due to the expansion after gluing. This danger can, of course, be minimized if the grain runs up and down the page, allowing the paper to stretch across the grain as it naturally must, as the result of the moisture of the glue swelling the fibres.

It is for precisely this reason that most lithographers order the grain in their paper the long way of the sheet, so that the sheet in passing through the press may do its normal stretching without causing a wrinkle.

Even paper dealers appear at times oblivious to the matter of grain in cutting their cards, with the result that a card in which the grain runs in short dimensions appears lifeless and without snap. The necessity for folding bristol boards with the grain is also at times overlooked.

Printers who have close register to obtain could well afford to give these matters careful study. Daily observations of the relative humidity and its effect on the work on the press might profitably be made; then the impossible would less often be demanded of the pressman.

To sum up, after determining the process by which a paper is to be ordered made, directions should be given as to the running of the grain, according to the amount of flexibility or stiffness desired. The probable effect of humidity in relation to the paper as applied to the work to be accomplished should also be given due consideration.

THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE HELD UP BY THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT.

THE Mexican government is holding 750 copies of The American Magazine which fell under the ban of censorship with the publication of an article on the Yaqui Indians and which, according to information received at the publication office in New York, is branded as inflammatory literature and prohibited from public sale.

The story is one of a series written by John Kenneth Turner in The American Magazine under the title "Barbarous Mexico." It first attracted the attention of the Mexican censor a month ago when a number of cases of the magazine were refused by the Mexican express companies. At the same time the book concern which sells the magazine at the railway stations informed the publishers that it could not receive the copies which included the article about the government.

The mail edition of last month's number reached its destination, and on the supposition that it would again pass the border the publishers sent a bigger shipment on October 18. The magazines have not yet been received in Mexico and no official notice has been sent to the publishers, who have communicated with the post-office authorities in Washington.

The previous numbers of the magazine which escaped the censor sold at big prices when they were put in circulation in the City of Mexico. The present article pictures murder and slavery of the Yaqui Indians. A photograph showing the conditions in the Belem prison, in Mexico City, is said to be counted among the objectionable features by the censor.

THE IDENTITY OF JUNIUS.

R. A. AUSTEN LEIGH, of 5 New Street Square, London, writes to The Athenæum of a certain discovery which, he thinks, may point to the authorship of the Junius letters, as follows:

Turning over the leaves of an old ledger belonging to William Strahan, the founder of the printing business now known as Spottiswoode & Co., I find certain items entered under the name of Mr. Francis for the years 1762-3-4. Many of the items are at present entered as anonymous in the British Museum Catalogue, and now that it is possible to ascribe them to Francis (there is nothing to show whether to the elder or the younger), some who are well versed in the Junius controversy may be able to find further proof, one way or another, as to the authorship of the letters. I append the various items:

1762, Decr. Letter from the Cocoa Tree; 2 sheets, No. 1000.

Do. Second Edition, No. 1000.

1763, April. Letter to the Whigs, 2 sheets, No. 1000.

Letter to Charles Townsend, 3 half-sheets, No. 500.

Do. 2nd Edit. No. 500.

Lying Intelligencer, 4 numbers and No. 2 recomposed, 7½ sheets, No. 250.

June. Letter to Lord Temple, No. 1000. Constitution vindicated, 2½ sheets, No. 500.

April. Political Theatre, 5 sheets, No. 750.

Novr. Moderator No. 1, one sheet and a half, No. 250.

Decr. Conduct of the Administration in the Prosecution of Wilkes, 2½ sheets, No. 500.

1764, August. Letter to the Author of a Letter to Geo. Grenville, 2½ sheets, No. 500.

Do. reprinted, No. 300.

BEST-SELLER BUBBLES.

THE "best seller" seems to mask a modern form of philanthropy, according to a New York publisher. "Everybody knows," says the Literary Digest, "that the fortunate author accumulates motor-cars and country houses from the proceeds of these wealth-producers. But Mr. Henry Holt is credited with saying that 'a best seller generally sells as long as it is advertised at a little more expense than it returns to its publishers.' This, he says, 'used to be the way before the failure of the concerns who discovered that way of making best sellers.' The day of best sellers now seems to him to be on the wane, and to support his belief he quotes a publisher who 'gambles higher for them' than he will and who 'has made some famous losses in his advances' as having told him that 'within a few years writers of best sellers have had to put up with a sale of 25,000 copies where they used to get a sale of 100,000.' Utilitarian books are more profitable than 'pure literature.'"

Mr. Holt gives his opinion as follows in an interview in the New York Times:

"I have never considered the miscellaneous book business worth doing in itself anyhow. By that I mean fiction and poetry—pure literature—likewise impure and muddy literature.

"It is only the publication of more or less standard books—books related more or less to the utilities—that will justify any house in keeping in business, as some people holding different opinions have learned to their cost.

"The reason is that fiction seems to have as mad a fascination in it for some publishers as for confirmed novel-readers—which is not true of the more prosy kinds of books. As a consequence of this competition in fiction, the number of houses given to publishing it, the royalties paid to authors, and the discounts to dealers have taken the profit out of it."

This conservative publisher hasn't a very high opinion of the "ultimate value of writing that is being done nowadays in this country," as we learn from these words:

"Compared to the '50s and '60s, American literature is dead. Everyone knows that. But American literature in the '50s and '60s meant six or eight great authors, whereas now there are ten respectable authors where there was but one during the great epoch. This I attribute chiefly to the international copyright law, also to the enormous development of education in the West.

"In the great epoch a large portion of the manuscripts offered to publishers were so poor that they could be dismissed at a glance, while now nearly all have got to receive some sort of attention. There are very obvious reasons for the improvement, but why did so many people who didn't know how write before? The same class has learned how now, I suppose.

"I should be inclined to attribute something of the falling off in the very highest grade of writing to the falling off in religious enthusiasm, but for the fact that most of the writers in the great epoch had themselves already been through such a falling off.

"Probably the loss of very high literary quality is due to the fact that commercialism is draining off the talent into the money-making pursuits; and especially to the new fashion—developed by the literary agent of making authorship one of them."

COMMUNICATIONS.

IS THE LABORER WORTHY OF HIS HIRE?

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: The communication signed "Bookseller," in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of October 9, and that headed "Does the Requirement of an Excessive Purchase in Order to Secure a Living Discount Pay?" was read with much interest.

It seems to be entirely along the lines of business procedure, between producer and distributor. I remember that a number of years ago I secured an arrangement with certain publishers whereby a certain amount should be bought each month in order to secure a maximum discount. I soon found that during July and August the maximum monthly discount could not be reached, but I did find that my yearly purchases were from five to ten times in excess of the amount required in monthly purchases. It seemed to me that it was a fair proposition to say that we would take so much per year and not lose our rightful profit on two months' purchases because these happened to be dull months, and I in turn having on hand a stock of books published by each of the publishers in question, amounting to a number of thousand dollars all the time.

The publishers saw the truth of my contention, and after that I had no trouble; all of which leads me to think that we should buy at a discount which will give a living profit at all times, and that when we exceed a certain gross amount from the publisher's whole list during the year, there should be a rebate.

I have before me a letter written by one of the leading booksellers of this country. He writes his belief in "fixed prices under contract at more than a living profit so that an occasional bookseller may be honestly reputed to have some wealth."

He goes on to say that "If there is to be no better discount on quantity I should speak for an application of the extra discount to the grand total of purchases made by a bookseller during the year."

I have heard this same thing expressed spontaneously by a number of booksellers whom publishers consider it best to do business with.

It is entirely in the line with my own thoughts, and I was much interested in the communication in reference to the stationery experience of "Bookseller."

HOW TO KEEP STORE WINDOWS FROM FREEZING.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

SIR: Referring to your editorial in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY of October 30, regarding freezing of show windows, where the window is boxed in so as to keep the warm air of the store away from it, a few holes at the top and a few at the bottom will cause a current of air that will keep the glass the same temperature on both sides and will prevent frosting. Our windows are treated in this way and do not freeze in the coldest weather.

SMITH & BUTTERFIELD CO.

EVANSVILLE, IND., November 11, 1909.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

At the examination of Stephen Phillips, the poet who has been declared a bankrupt, it appeared that for eighteen months "he had been borrowing from friends and money lenders."

THE Countess Tolstoy has recently gone to St. Petersburg to seek the Government's assent to the publication of an authorized uniform edition of her husband's writings.

GENERAL BOOTH, of the Salvation Army, is writing his autobiography. He returned to public life last week after undergoing surgical treatment for a defect in his eyesight. During his hours of darkness he was busy dictating his life story.

"HIS MAJESTY'S SLOOP DIAMOND ROCK," published five years ago under the name of H. S. Houghton, is, it appears, the work of Herbert H. Smith, whose own publishers, Houghton Mifflin Company, were unaware until very recently that the name on the title-page of his book was not his own.

SCHILLER's one hundred and fiftieth birthday, which fell on November 10, was observed in Berlin with a very elaborate programme of addresses and dramatic performances by the most distinguished German and foreign actors, authors and critics who have had to do with Schiller and his works. Celebrations were held also in other German cities.

THE retirement of Goldwin Smith from active journalism is announced in the Toronto Weekly Sun for November 10, which has for years been the official organ of his utterances. "Mr. Goldwin Smith wishes us to state," says the Sun, "that old age requires him to retire from journalism. Anonymous articles therefore are no longer to be ascribed to his pen." Mr. Smith's last letter, which appears in the same issue, scores the British Foreign Office, on the ground that it is ambitious for the cause and justification of war, and asks if Canada can trust it.

JOSEPH B. GILDER, editor of Putnam's Magazine, has written the words and composed the air of a patriotic song or anthem, entitled "In God We Trust," which had its first public hearing on September 25, ("Taft Day,") at Seattle, Washington, where it was sung as a chorus on the occasion of the President's visit to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition. Mr. Gilder is the author of "The Parting of the Ways," which first appeared in Harper's Weekly, apropos of the war with Spain, and is now included in Stedman's and other anthologies of American verse. He is also the compiler of the volume of documents and addresses called "The American Idea."

It is said that Maria Thompson Daviess, the author of "Miss Selina Lue," (Bobbs-Merrill,) has enough relatives in Kentucky and Tennessee to buy out an ordinary edition of a novel. Miss Daviess is a dyed-in-the-wool American, for in all the direct branches of her family tree she hasn't an ancestor who came to America after the Revolution. But she is not the sort to rest content with the achievements of her forefathers. She must be doing herself. After enjoying all the good time of a "Blue Grass belle," she sold a grant of land that had been made to her family by the Governor of Virginia before Kentucky became a State, took the proceeds and went to Paris to study art. The second and third year her pictures were hung on the line at the Salon. Then she came back to America, and opened a studio for miniature painting at Nashville. In a studio across the hall from her's was organized a little club of professional writers and artists. They called it the "Pen and Brush Round Table." Miss Daviess was elected to lead the art side of the table, but at the third meeting she read a Dutch baby story she had written. And from that time on she found a ready market for all the stories she could do. Out of such beginnings grew "Miss Selina Lue."

OBITUARY NOTES.

FREDERICK WÜRTZBACH, who claimed to have brought the first woodpulp-making machine to this country from Germany, died on October 28, in a hospital in Pittsfield, Mass., in his seventy-third year. In 1866, Mr. Würtzbach made in Stockbridge, Mass., for the late A. Pagenstecher, what was considered to be the first woodpulp ever made in this country. His process made possible the making of cheaper newspapers.

MISS ALICE BERTHA KROEGER, librarian of the Drexel Institute of Philadelphia, and director of the Drexel Institute Library School since their establishment in 1892, died suddenly on October 31. Miss Kroeger had been in ill-health for some months, and during her summer vacation took a trip abroad in the hope that it would restore her strength, but returned to her work little benefited by the change. Up to October 27 Miss Kroeger, with characteristic devotion to duty, was carrying her regular schedule of work, and on that date delivered her last lecture to the school. As the author of "Guide to Reference Books" and "Aids in Book Selection" she has contributed valuable aids to bibliography. Miss Kroeger was a graduate of the New York Library School, and began her library career early in life in the St. Louis Public Library.

DR. WILLIAM TORREY HARRIS, ex-United States Commissioner of Education, died in Providence, R. I., on November 8. Dr. Harris was born in North Killingly, Conn., on September 10, 1835. He attended Yale for two and a half years, but was not graduated. The degree of A.M. was given him by his college, however, in 1869 and an LL.D. in 1895. He was a teacher in the public schools of St. Louis from 1858 to 1867 and superintendent of schools there from 1867 to 1880. He was appointed commissioner of education of the United States in 1889 and served until 1906. He was connected with the American Social Science Association fifteen years, writing many papers for it, and was also a member of the Washington Academy of Sciences and the American Philosophical Association. Dr. Harris received from the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, "as the first man to whom such recognition for meritorious service is given, the highest retiring allowance which our rules will allow, an annual income of $3000." His death came at the completion of the new edition of Webster's International Dictionary, of which he was editor-in-chief, and into which, by the development of a system which he had worked out, are compacted four hundred thousand words, derivations and meanings. Among Dr. Harris's principal literary contributions were "Psychologic Foundations of Education" and "The Spiritual Sense of Dante's Divina Commedia."

JOHN IRELAND, who was connected with the booktrade for about fifty years, died on November 8, after an illness of a few weeks. Mr. Ireland was born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1844. His family emigrated and settled in Montreal, Canada, when young Ireland was about four years old. At the age of twelve he entered the employ of the Dawsons, the well-known Canadian booksellers. Coming to New York in 1863, he secured a position with Sheldon & Co., subsequently entering the employ of Thomas Nelson & Sons. In 1865 he took a position with A. D. F. Randolph, in whose service he remained until 1885, when he opened up a book business on his own account at 1192 Broadway, in New York City. He catered to a society trade, and a large part of his sales were made on long time. As he had but a limited working capital Mr. Ireland, in 1898, was obliged to compromise with his creditors, who very generously offered to back him until he could assemble strength enough to work without help; but he preferred to give his services in the employ of others to secure enough means to wipe out his obligations, which in themselves were not heavy ones. In the holiday season of 1898 he obtained a position in the retail department of G. P. Putnam's Sons, which he held until he was taken ill a few weeks ago. Mr. Ireland was a thorough bookman and in love with his profession. His charming manner won for him many friends who will hear of his death with genuine regret.

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

THE Hartford Courant celebrated on October 30th the 145th anniversary of its first issue. Proud of its ripe old "youngness," The Courant made a special feature of a sketch of its history and portraits of its early editors. The first issue of The Courant appeared October 29, 1764. The paper was founded by Thomas Green, of the famous Boston firm of printers, and was run off on the first press ever set up in Hartford. Green left Hartford about 1768 for New Haven to develop the publishing business there, and before going he took into partnership Ebenezer Watson, whom he left in charge of the paper. Watson died in 1777, and for a year after "the Widow Watson" conducted The Courant.

BUSINESS NOTES.

CINCINNATI, O.—Hall N. Jackson, bookseller, has removed to 719 Vine Street, where he has a nice, large store ninety feet deep, where he will be able to spread out his stock to better advantage. Vine Street is rapidly becoming the retail street of Cincinnati.

CLEVELAND, O.—J. H. Jansen, importer and dealer in books on architecture, decoration, etc., has succeeded M. A. Vinson, at 205 Caxton Building.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE MCGRAW-HILL BOOK COMPANY, New York, has just brought out a "Text-book of Ore Dressing," by Professor Robert H. Richards.

JOHN ERHARDT, JR., who was manufacturing man with the Frederick A. Stokes Company for the last two and a half years, is now with The Manhattan Press, 476 West Broadway, New York City.

C. M. CLARK PUBLISHING Co. have just issued "The Biter," "The Law of the Range" and "Winding Waters," all works of fiction, the latter dealing with happenings between General Custer and the Indians in his famous raids.

MISS JESSIE A. BROWN, who has been at the head of the book department of the Howland Dry Goods Co., of Bridgeport, Conn., for about seven years, has taken a position with the Edward P. Judd Co., of New Haven, Conn.

MANHATTAN BOOK COMPANY, 106 East Broadway, New York City, will publish November 18 a fourth edition of the famous Russian novel, "What's to be Done," by N. G. Tchernichewsky, translated by Benjamin R. Tucker.

SMITH & McCANCE, 38 Bromfield Street, Boston, have just published a second edition of "Tom Moore in Bermuda: a Bit of Literary Gossip," by J. C. L. Clark, profusely illustrated and appealing to all who love the "Irish Melodies" and their creator.

THE RUSSELL PRINTING CO., Buffalo, N. Y., has just ready a genealogical work on "The Frost Family in England and America," by Thomas G. Frost and E. L. Frost. Thomas G. Frost is a member of the law firm of Frost & Nieman, at 76 William Street, New York City.

THE BALL PUBLISHING COMPANY, Boston, will at once bring out a skit entitled "A Dash to the Pole, by William Lyon Phelps, R.F.D., Champion Pole Vaulter, Ehrenmitglied des Ananias-Klubes, Knight of the Order of the Midnight Sons, Membre de L'Institut de Gall." It will contain thirty full-page illustrations by John Goss and is the work of the professor of English in Yale University.

FREDERICK A. STOKES Co. will add "Sargent" and "Raeburn" to their Masterpieces in Color; and "Dürer" to their Painters' Series. For the young they promise "Chemistry for the Young," by Tudor Jenks; "Birds of the World for Young People," by Charles R. Knight and Ella Hardcastle, with 41 lithographic plates in colors; also, "Boys' Book of Airships," by Harry Delacombe, with many illustrations from photographs.

STURGIS & WALTON COMPANY will issue shortly "Each for All and All for Each," by John Parsons, a convenient reference work on the social questions of the day that are incessantly discussed in the newspapers and periodicals. Within the month may be expected a very handsome de luxe edition of Tennyson's "In Memoriam," illustrated and decorated by Clara M. Burd; and also a small quarto edition that will make a pretty gift book.

THE BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE will give its November dinner at the Aldine Association's rooms in the Fifth Avenue Building, Fifth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, New York, on the evening of November 17, at 6:30 o'clock. The guests of the evening will be Garrett P. Serviss, author of "Curiosities of the Sky," and Isaac Taylor Headland, author of "Court Life in China," etc. Members who wish to secure a place at the dinner table must notify Charles A. Burkhardt, 31 W. Twenty-third Street, before November 15.

MITCHELL KENNERLEY will publish next week Sewell Ford's "Honk, Honk! Shorty McCabe at the Wheel," in which this cheerful writer gives his varied experiences with running an automobile. It seems as though a new spirit had come into publishing when Mitchell Kennerley, who has published so many successful novels, announces seven volumes of poetry in a single season. They are by Bliss Carman, John G. Neihardt, Charles Hanson Towne, Theodosia Garrison, Richard Le Gallienne, John Davidson and Blanche Shoemaker Wagstaff.

ANENT the Cook-Pearry controversy, "Why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" when the immortal "Golliwog" discovered the Pole in 1900. We have it from Longmans, Green & Co. that this great traveller, whose doings have been chronicled for twelve successive Christmases to the delight of nursery readers, not only found it and carved the names of his companions on it, but proved his claim through the immediate acceptance of his story by an expectant child-world. Just now this really great explorer is in the African Jungle and his experiences there will shortly be given to the public.

ONE of the most important contributions to recent literature is "In Wildest Africa," by Peter MacQueen, (L. C. Page & Company,) the record of a hunting and exploration trip through Uganda, Victoria Nyanza, the Kili-manjoro region and British East Africa, with an account of the ascent of the snow fields of Mount Kibo in Central East Africa and a description of the various native tribes. Readers of his magazine articles might naturally expect Mr. MacQueen's book to be the latest and most authoritative word on this country of the past and future, but the map which accompanies the book is a genuine surprise.

KING EDWARD VII., on the occasion of the opening of a new wing to the National Hospital for the Paralyzed and Epileptic, of which Frederick Macmillan is chairman, conferred the honor of Knighthood on Mr. Macmillan, the well-known head of Macmillan & Co., of London. Sir Frederick has long ago won for himself the regard and respect of the trade as a supporter of its best traditions and as a champion of the cause of fair dealing, as well as on account of his endeavors to relieve and lessen pain and suffering among his fellow townsmen. We offer congratulations on behalf of his American colleagues.

A. WESSELS, New York, has in active preparation "Trailing and Camping in Alaska," by Addison M. Powell, who has followed the trail in Alaska for upwards of twenty years. The insight the author gives into the hardships of prospectors, into the manners and customs of the Indians and whites, wonderful bits of description of scenery, glaciers, swift-running rivers, canyons, whirlpools, volcanoes; of the flora of that short summer of the midnight sun; of encounters with grizzlies, the shooting of such wild game as moose and caribou; glimpses of human tragedy, of human sympathy, and unselfishness—it all makes up an absorbingly interesting and well-told tale. The book will be profusely illustrated.

HARPER & BROTHERS have just ready "Captain Stormfield's Visit to Heaven," by Mark Twain, who lets the captain tell in the first person how he has been dead for thirty years, whirling through space when he made the visit to heaven and found no one who had ever heard of the earth. This, of course, gives Mark Twain a chance to point out with rollicking humor that San Francisco, California, the United States, America, are not quite as big in the general plan of the world as some of us think them. They have also ready "The Great English Essayists," the second instalment in the Readers' Library; and a reprint of A. Henry Savage Landor's "In the Forbidden Land," (Thibet,) which now is in a new one-volume edition.

HENRY HOLT & Co. take pity on the overcrowded cataloguers and critics, and will today make their last contributions for the season to the new books for general readers: Miss Jane Grey Perkins's "Life of the Honorable Mrs. Norton," with illustrations; "The Sinking Ship," a vivid novel of theatrical life in London, by Eva Lathbury, author of "The Long Gallery; also, "The House of the Heart," a book of quaint little plays, a number of them morality plays for children, by Miss Constance D'Arcy Mackay. In regard to Mrs. Norton, it may be recalled that she was one of the most brilliant women in the last half of the nineteenth century, and known as one of the "three graces" of English society. She was a granddaughter of Sheridan, the great dramatist, and author of several novels, many poems and songs, contesting contemporary popularity with Mrs. Browning.

THE New York State Library has just published the "Calendar of the Sir William Johnson Manuscripts in the New York State Library," compiled by Richard E. Day. The documents described in this calendar are preserved in twenty-six large volumes in the State Library and number about 6550. Nearly all were public and private papers in the possession of Sir William Johnson at the time of his death in 1774. They have come into the possession of the State of New York in various ways—by purchase and by gift. These documents cast a vivid light on military and political events and situations during a considerable period of the eighteenth century, while they reveal the attitude of colony and crown toward the Indian problem of that day, and present a picture of the transactions in land which engaged the keenest interest of English colonists. At the same time they are invaluable memorials of a strong and genial personality around which romantic interest continues to gather with the movement of years. The compilation of the calendar was done under the supervision of A. J. F. van Laer, archivist of the State Library. The work was begun while Dr. Day was in the employ of the State of New York, and was continued after his transfer to the office of the state historian.

JOHN LANE COMPANY have just ready William Watson's "Woman With a Serpent's Tongue," of which all England is talking, and besides which the volume contains poems on Vivisection, the Church to-day, Leopold of Belgium and other burning questions of the day. They also have just published a volume of the "Selected Poems of John Davidson," which contains the best work of the unfortunate poet who was driven to suicide. Among the poems are contained "A Ballad of a Nun," "A Ballad of Heaven," "A Ballad of Hell," "Epilogue of Fleet Street Eclogues," "Earth to Earth," "The Testament of a Man Forbid," etc. William Watson fought a loyal battle for his fellow-poet, Davidson, in an attempt to secure for him a pension from the English government. This aid to the needy poet was refused. "The Woman with the Serpent's Tongue," according to rumor, was responsible for the government's refusal to grant this pension. John Davidson committed suicide shortly after, being unable to survive his disappointment and to cope with the struggle for existence. Other books just brought out are "The Soul of a Turk," by Victoria de Bunsen, the outcome of several journeys in Asiatic and European Turkey, notably one through the Armenian provinces, down the Tigris on a raft to Bagdad, and across the Syrian desert to Damascus; and a careful work on "Giovanni Boccaccio," by Edward Hutton, containing a concordance and full synopsis of "The Decameron," with many bibliographies, also many illustrations from rare sources.

AUCTION SALES.

NOVEMBER 16, 17, 2 P.M.—Engravings, etchings, lithographs, etc., Boston Museum of Fine Arts duplicates. Pt. 1, A to E. (505 lots.)—Libbie.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers, under their own names, are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, or those advertising anonymously, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line. All objectionable books will be excluded so far as they come under our notice.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No reduction for repeated matter.

All other small undisplayed advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no account must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their Communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

1st In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash.]

2nd Write your wants plainly, and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay" book-sellers should take the usual precautions, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

CUSTOMERS THAT BUY

How to Gather Them In

BOOKSELLERS are naturally interested in methods of attracting buyers—ways of holding the old ones, means of securing new ones—especially during the holiday season.

An outlay of ten, twenty, or even fifty dollars, is not a very large sum to spend in order to attract the attention of the best buyers to your display. The money might easily be wasted in ineffective local advertising or in pithless circulars, but it can be used to the greatest direct advantage by sending the "CHRISTMAS BOOKSHELF" (a digest of all the important new books of the year of the leading publishers) with your exclusive imprint on the cover, to the people of means and position in your vicinity. It is by far the best holiday list that is issued anywhere, and the recipient always feels flattered in receiving a copy.

THE CHRISTMAS BOOKSHELF (which is the Christmas Number of The Publishers' Weekly on somewhat thinner paper) is supplied in lots of 100 at 10 cents each; 250 at 8 cents; 500 for $38.00; or 1000 for $75.00.

 If you want a supply we must hear from you promptly as we print only for advance orders. We can promise delivery by the end of November.

An Introduction
by HUGH
ROBERT
MILL, D.Sc.,
And an Account of the First Journey to the South Magnetic Pole by Professor T. W.
EDGEWORTH
DAVID, F.R.S.

NOTHING could be more timely than the publication of this wonderful work by a real discoverer whose achievements have placed him on a plane with such explorers as Peary and Cook. Although his goal lay in the opposite direction, and his path led into a much less explored section, he succeeded in locating the South Magnetic Pole and came almost within sight of the South Pole.

This is the first exhaustive work on the subject that is creating a veritable sensation in all parts of the civilized world at the present time. It is not merely made up of newspaper articles and fragmentary sketches, but is Lieutenant Shackleton's own account of a wonderfully successful expedition, carefully planned and executed. Outside of the important scientific facts and discoveries revealed in the book, it is full of exciting adventure, wonderfully illustrated, and is undoubtedly the greatest work of exploration and travel of the year.

ROBERT HICHENS' Greatest NovelBella
Donna

"'Bella Donna' is a country as well as a woman. It is Egypt as 'Kim' is India. . . . The public has seldom the opportunity to show its appreciation of a novel of such originality, charm, and power."
